Press Release

transport logistic Americas & air cargo forum Miami

Trade Fairs at the US Hub Miami on Course

- Preparations for air cargo forum Miami & transport logistic Americas are proceeding according to schedule
- International logistics industry is demonstrating great interest

The conference program is being prepared and exhibitors are registering. Transport logistic Americas is taking off. It will take place alongside of the established Air Cargo Forum of TIACA for the first time. On this platform, shippers, logistics service providers and logistics-related service providers from all over the world will meet in Miami from November 10 to 12, 2020.

Together with The International Air Cargo Association (TIACA), Messe München is setting an important signal for the global logistics industry. Exhibitors from around the world will meet on 6,700 square meters at the Miami Beach Convention Center in Florida, USA, for three days. As a supply chain forum, they represent intercontinental supply chains with their diverse services.

“The trade fair at the hub for North and South America is attracting a great deal of interest. Despite the current crisis, requests are constantly coming from the USA, North and South America, and we are currently putting together a high-profile conference program with our partners,” Gerhard Gerritzen, member of the Executive Board of Messe München, stated.

More than 70 exhibition booths are permanently booked a good six months before the start of the trade fair. International airlines and airports as well as airfreight-specific system providers and service providers are among the exhibitors signed up for the established Air Cargo Forum. In the exhibition area of transport logistics Americas, the first international logistics service providers and local providers of intermodal services on land, water and in the air have registered.
